

A Visit From the Author

Through the use of a multi-media presentation, Ms. Moulder will take your students on a journey through the writing process. With honesty and humor, she discusses the agony of editing, the frustrations of re-writing, and the joy of seeing her work published for the first time.

"When Holly Moulder starts speaking, you have no doubt that she's a former Teacher of the Year. She can captivate a large audience while she makes the writing process and facts relevant to students. This is one presenter/writer you don't want to miss."—Dr. Jory Westberry, Principal, Tommie Barfield Elementary School, Marco Island, FL

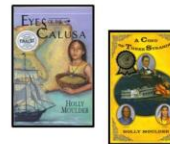

"Mrs. Moulder's visit with our students and faculty was spectacular. Our teachers are still talking about her marvelous story. We highly recommend her program to other schools."

—Bill Langston, Media Specialist
Charleston, South Carolina

Supplementary Materials

Also available through White Pelican Press

- Teacher's guide CDs for both books contain over 100 pages of sheets and activities$17.95
- Hard back copies of each title.....$14.95
- Paper back copies of each title.....$8.95
- Laminated posters.....$12.95

Now Available!

Creative Writing Workshops for Third through Fifth graders!

Innovative and fun, these forty-five minute workshops are guaranteed to get your upper elementary students excited about writing! Workshops are correlated to your state standards. Contact White Pelican Press for details!

To order books or to schedule a visit for your school, use the contact information listed below:

White Pelican Press

132 Marcella Avenue
Sharpsburg, Georgia

770-251-3764
fishermoulder@aol.com

www.WhitePelicanPress.com

White Pelican Press

Historical Fiction

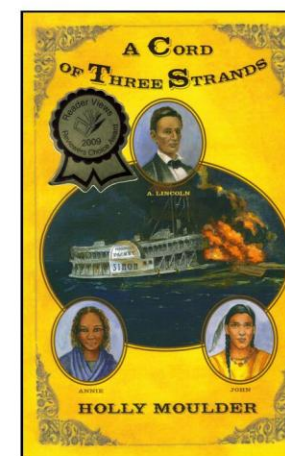

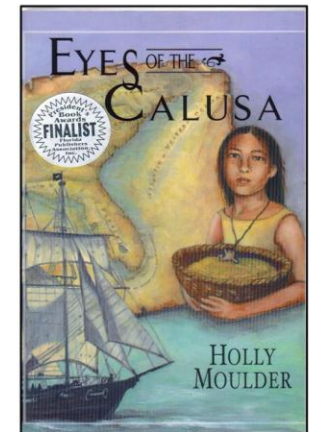

for middle grades

Author Holly Moulder, former Teacher of the Year!

Silver Medal Winner

Young Adult
Fiction

Florida
Publishers Association

Gold Medal Winner

Young Adult
Fiction
Florida Publishers Association

2009
Eric Hoffer
Awards

"Action-packed,... firmly grounded in history! — Midwest Book Review

In the opening years of the eighteenth century, fierce Calusa Indians rule the Golden Coast of South-west Florida. Pirates patrol the area, looking for Indians to capture and sell at the slave auction in Charles Town, South Carolina .

One evening as the Calusa girl, Mara, and her sister search the shoreline for a lost toy, pirates come ashore seeking human treasure. Mara is kidnapped and dragged aboard Captain Hannah Dunne's frigate, the Devil Ray. In the months that follow, Mara's journey takes her far from her Calusa home to the slave quarters of an indigo plantation in the lowlands of South Carolina. On the plantation, she uncovers secret plans for a slave rebellion and is forced to make desperate choices.

Eyes of the Calusa is educational and entertaining! This book captures one's attention with pirates, Indians, slavery, and having to make life changing decisions.

—Brenda Pratt, Media Specialist Coweta County, Georgia

Holly Moulder

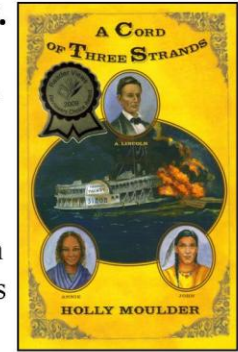

A talented educator and former Teacher of the Year, Ms. Moulder taught elementary grades in Georgia for over twenty years. In 2006 she left the classroom in search of a new way to motivate middle grade students to read!

This novel was a turning point for one of my special needs students who thought he could not read chapter books. He became so enthralled with the story that he finished before anyone else. He gained confidence and began reading books on his own. What a success story!

—Kitty Lambert, fourth grade teacher
Newnan, Georgia

The year is 1838.

John, a thirteen-year-old Cherokee boy, is forced to leave his home in Georgia to walk what is now known as the Trail of Tears to the Oklahoma Territory.

In Alabama, twelve-year-old Annie is a runaway slave traveling the Underground Railroad in a desperate search for freedom.

When their paths cross during a blizzard in Kentucky, the pair agrees to travel on together. This "cord of three strands" becomes complete when they are joined on their journey by a young lawyer named Abraham Lincoln.

"Deftly written! Highly recommended!"

—The Midwest Book Review

"Moulder has done an excellent job incorporating vast amounts of detail into a compelling story that shows there are always at least two sides to any account."

—Eric Hoffer Awards
www.theZusReview.com